Symposium 2

Security Innovation Matters

Delivering real innovation.
Increasing uptake.
Advancing impact.

1 July

- * How can EU security R&I projects increase the uptake of their practical outputs?
- * What do security researchers, practitioners and policymakers think drives effective security R&I?
- * What processes, methods and resources might increase the societal impact of EU security R&I?
- * What are the winning solution concepts to current security challenges proposed by the next generation of designers?

Join us to explore unique perspectives and insights on how we can achieve more impactful security innovation across Europe.

This one-day event brings together security researchers, practitioners and policymakers to explore human-centred approaches to strengthening EU security R&I.

This symposium will feature thought-provoking presentations and discussions, alongside a showcase of innovative, human-centred design concepts from the finalists of our first E2i Student Design Challenge. The winning and runner-up entries will be awarded live at the event, celebrating outstanding creativity and design excellence.
